THE FALLING SNOW. I lean upon my window sill
And gaze into the night,
To watch the swiftly falling snow,
Enshroud the earth in white.

I love to watch the downy flakes like chrystals in the air. They hide the rough and barren ground And make all nature fair.

The school-boy's shout with merry glee As home from school they go. And hait the winter's welcome sign, The falling of the snow. It seems so very strange to me— And others too I ween— That aged men are discentent When wintry skies are seen.
